

FARM BUREAU NOTES

Organization Works Fine in Kent Co. Early last week H. C. Smith, the County Agricultural Agent of Kent County, Michigan, was a caller at the Van Buren County Farm Bureau office at Paw Paw. Mr. Smith has been in the Extension Service for some years having been County Agricultural Agent in Alpena County before coming to Kent County and has been very successful with his work in both counties. Mr. Smith is one of the pioneers in an endeavor to get the work on an organized basis and has changed the whole system in his county from personal calls, which means a great amount of time and energy expended with but few farmers getting anything out of the work to a system by which he works with masses of farmers through Commu-

ity Organizations for Farm Bureau Work, with each community doing work along any lines the farmer of the particular community may decide needs to be done.

We have in this county two communities organized for Farm Bureau Work and hope this coming Fall and winter to get the whole county organized in this way, and I wish right here, to ask the farmers of the county to get back of the movement.

The Farm Bureau is for every farmer in the county and it will become just what the majority of the farmers of the county want it to become, if they will get back of it.

In comparing notes with Mr. Smith the writer found that to do his work in September, Mr. Smith drove a little better than four hundred miles, as compared to better than 1363 miles by the County Agricultural Agent for this county, and from all accounts without a doubt, Mr. Smith did much more work than was done in this county, but very likely did not expend nearly the amount of energy that was expended in this county. This is just the difference between system in the work and a lack of system.

We are getting things more and more systematized all of the time, but it takes a great deal of time to do so. It would be done so much quicker and easier if the farmers will fall in, feeling that the whole movement is their own and that they are responsible for it.

Let us get together back of the Farm Bureau movement that we may have a bigger and better agriculture in Van Buren County and thus a better county.
